Privacy Statement

WellSpan Wellness Services takes confidentiality seriously. Your individual health information is protected and will not be shared with entities or individuals outside the WellSpan Wellness Services staff. We do share non-identifiable, aggregated data with your employer to help them understand the overall health risks and trends within their employee population.

By agreeing to participate in the wellness program you are agreeing to the following privacy terms:

Collection of protected health information (PHI)

WellSpan Wellness Services collects personal health information for the management of this wellness program including your medical, pharmacy, clinical and biometric data. This information is collected from your health risk assessment, clinical screenings, medical and pharmacy claims. All data will be consolidated within the wellness database so that the information is available to support you. This information can only be accessed by you and staff members who manage the wellness program.

Use of protected health information (PHI)

WellSpan Wellness Services uses your health information in different ways.

We share non-identifiable aggregated data with your employer to help them understand the overall health risks and trends within their employee population.

We use the data to identify your risk factors. You may be contacted by a WellSpan staff member to discuss your risk factors and provide guidance to you on your journey to better health.

Screening results

If your company wellness program includes a wellness lab clinical screening, it is your responsibility to share and discuss your screening results with your primary care provider (PCP). Your PCP does not automatically see your screening results.

The responsibility for sharing results with your family physician or seeking additional medical advice and treatment for any health-related concerns, is yours and not that of WellSpan Health.

These lab tests are ordered in the context of a wellness benefit offered by your employer. These tests are not to replace the relationship you have with your PCP.
